Who Said Arkansas Was Rich?

S. B. 148 Will Raise the Unemployment Ante

The 2.7 per cent unemployment tax which Arkansas payrolls deliver to the state treasury, on the promise that businesses with a good employment record will have the tax reduced under the merit-rating system, is going to get heavier, not lighter—if Senate Bill 148 is enacted into law. I see by the news columns of today's Star that local industries and business houses are becoming aroused over this specific bill, but The Star has been attacking the whole setup of unemployment legislation the last two years as an invasion of a few industrial and business payrolls by that army of "relievers" whose cost should fairly rest upon the entire public.

The very heart and essence of the unemployment tax plan is that the tax shall be light on businesses with a good record, and heavy on busnesses with a bad record.

This merit-rating system, as it is called, was guaranteed at the time the federal Social Security System was adopted. Unemployment aid was advanced as a form of job insurance—and the merit-rating system, regulating the tax on the employer, was its most vital feature, for it is a cardinal principle in all forms of insurance that the insurance premium or tax is regulated by the risk. In life insurance, for instance, a man working in a powder factory pays a much higher premium than an office worker—obviously he does, or the system would be unfair to the office worker and he would wash his hands of the insurance company.

Not only has the Arkansas legislature been hoodwinked by the federal Social Security Board under the present law, but it is being taken for another "ride" under this Senate Bill 148 which some bright lad in Washington, no doubt, has handed our harassed youngsters in Little Rock and told them: "Must do."

But government in our United States comes up from its people; business men, employees, their wants and their problems—it isn't something that a clerk in the national capital simply mails out to a provincial legislature and orders: "Do this." For this is a big country, with diversified ways of earning a man's living—and hardly any one plan will work in every section equally well.

And it's about time for the citizens to tell their legislators this and hold them strictly to account.

The Arkansas legislature was a year late getting started with the administration of the unemployment system, although Arkansas business under federal law started paying taxes at the same time business did in all the other states.

Under the federal law it was possible after paying unemployment tax for five years to obtain a merit-rating, thereby reducing the unemployment tax in a business which had a good record.

The state of Texas, being prompt to get started, was therefore able to order the merit-rating system into effect the first of this year.

But Arkansas, late in getting started, had to delay the start of the merit-rating system until 1942.

Now here comes Senate Bill 148 and proposes:

1. To increase benefit payments.
2. To put off the beginning of the merit-rating system until 1943.
3. To make it doubtful whether the merit-rating system ever will be adopted in this state at all.

The Arkansas Press association and every other commercial organization in the state is absolutely opposed to this wildcat legislation.

Furthermore, the published facts are that disbursements under the present state unemployment law are beginning to push collections too closely.

Federal law provides that if the 2.7 per cent tax isn't high enough it may go higher. That's what you are asking for under Senate Bill 148.

Landslide Vote Followed by Court Approval

Decision Unanimous, Though Chief Justice Cites Different Reason

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)—Overwhelmingly, endorsed in a special referendum election Saturday Gov. Homer Adkins' plan for refunding the state's 137-million-dollar highway debt won supreme court approval Monday.

An official referendum tabulation from 1,238 precincts of the state's 2,000 on the question whether the state refunding board should proceed with the refunding gave the following vote:

For 56,675.
Against 462.

Huge Local Majorities
The refunding questions on Saturday's special election ballot were given astronomical majorities in both Hempstead and Nevada counties.

The Hempstead vote on Act 4:
For 1,157.
Against 11.
For bonds 1,158.
Against 10.
The Nevada vote on Act 4:
For 577.
Against 2.
For bonds 577.
Against 2.

From the same precincts the vote on whether the refunding should be effected through Act 4 which recently passed the legislature without a dissenting vote was:

For 57,045.
Against 472.

Ruling on test cases brought against the plan, the court unanimously upheld validity of Act 4 of 1941 under which the governor proposes to refund prior to April 1, and similarly upheld validity of Saturday's quick-called referendum at which the electorate returned a landslide vote for the program and in effect "endorsed the note" of the proposed new bonds.

Two Courses of Reasoning
Two opinions were handed down on the case, one written by Associate Justice Frank Smith stating the majority opinion, and the other by Chief Justice Griffin Smith concurring in the majority verdict but reaching that decision by a different process of reasoning.

The court unanimously agreed that eight members of the legislature—three senators and five representatives—were ineligible to serve on the new refunding board created by the Adkins act, but upheld eligibility of the remaining 23 members—16 private citizens, the state's constitutional officers and the state bank commissioner.

The Emergency Clause
The split between the majority and the chief justice came on the issue involving validity of the act's emergency clause.

A 1939 refunding measure sponsored by former Gov. Carl Bailey was held up when the court decided an emergency clause attached to the act was invalid. Chief justice Smith agreed with the majority in the case.

The Adkins act included a section stating that it created no vested right, and the majority accepted this declaration, replying in answer to the question whether such a right was created:

"It is entirely certain that the general assembly did not so intend."

The board of directors of the Hope Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the dinner, will act as a reception committee. Albert Graves will be master of ceremonies.

Due to limited hotel accommodations attendance at the banquet will be limited to 125 Hope and Hempstead county citizens, with the only outside guest being Governor Adkins. Unemployment Bill Attacked

Local Delegation to Appear Against S. B. 148 Tuesday

Hope industries were circularized Monday by Walter Verhalen, owner of Hope Basket company, with an accountant's recommendation that a local delegation appear in Little Rock Tuesday night in opposition to Senate Bill 148, which would make certain changes in the present unemployment compensation law.

R. P. Bowen, secretary of Hope Chamber of Commerce, announced Monday afternoon that the chamber was going over the matter with local factories and would arrange for a delegation to make the trip to the legislative hearing Tuesday night.

Mr. Verhalen's report to the other was going over the matter with local industries, based on a statement by his own accountant specializing in Social Security Tax Service, follows: "Your attention has, of course, been called to Senate Bill No. 148 which proposes to revamp the Unemployment Compensation Law. The information which has been sent out by the State Chamber of Commerce covers the changes in which you are especially interested. Under this bill benefit payments will be liberalized through the increase of weekly benefit amount, reduction in waiting period and certain changes in the disqualification provisions of the present law. The bill also proposes to defer the initiation of experience rating."

"The majority of the proposed changes are objectionable to employers who have co-operated with the effects of the original law which was based on the need for stabilized employment and benefits for workers who were involuntarily unemployed. Some of the changes which are being suggested are mostly for administrative purposes, it being hoped that these amendments will simplify the clerical and accounting work of the Unemployment Compensation Agency."

"You should make your position on this bill known to your senator and representatives, as conflicting information is being circulated as to the effects of the proposed legislation. The committee hearing has been scheduled to be held at the Marion Hotel Tuesday night, February 18, and it will probably be to your interest to have a representative attend this hearing; and in addition you might be interested in seeing their views on the question."

Armory Site Is Debated

Committee Reports to Judge; 2 Citizens Appear

The proposal to deed one corner of the west block of the Hempstead county courthouse property to the State Military Department for immediate construction of a National Guard armory there met with some debate early Monday afternoon when County Judge Fred Luck held a public hearing at the courthouse with the committee.

W. H. Olmstead and Paul Cobb, residents of the courthouse neighborhood, appeared in opposition to the proposal, saying some citizens felt the site should be used for the location of a new school building.

Meanwhile, the advisory committee made the following report to County Judge Luck:

To Honorable Fred Luck, County Judge

BERLIN — The Continental Express has always been fair territory for murder mystery writers, but if present war travel conditions are indicative, future heroines are going to die less glamorously on the trains from the Channel to Basel.

A spy wanting to be shot or stabbed in the traditional manner could search the length of a 16-coach train without finding a seat in any compartment. There wouldn't even be room to fall in the corridors. As for the vestibules—full up with civilians, soldiers and duffle bags stacked on cold, muddy platforms. No place to be heroic.

Furthermore, there's no such thing as receiving a phone call, packing the bags, rushing to Potsdamer Bahnhof and grabbing an express, all within 20 minutes.

On the Railway Waiting

Suppose you're not a spy, merely an average person with honest business on your mind. You want to get from Berlin to Paris and back and you want to do it quickly.

First you must have a permit to cross the frontier and recross it on the return trip. Put in an application with minute data about yourself and why you want to go. After a week, you can ask someone if anything has been done about it.

Yes, something has been done; you may expect your passport any day. After another week, ask about it again. Yes, it's coming through; you will be called. As the third week draws to a close, desperation gouges you into action, and you go knocking on doors.

Anyway—give it two or three weeks, and one day you get your pass. Ah! Now for a ticket. For a 30-hour trip you want a sleeper berth. Jawohl—if you want to wait until the middle of next week. Everything sold out until then.

Oh well, take a second-class ticket then, and hope the porter can be bribed for a place to sleep.

No Place for Clustrophobes
Three hours before daylight you're on the train, climbing in over a pile of duffle, several suit cases. You are trying to edge through half a dozen soldiers and civilians standing on the vestibule platter. They don't like it. They got there first. You look hopefully down the coach's corridor. Filled to the limit.

"Any room left in the compartments?" you ask.

Someone says "Ha" and others murmur you'll be lucky to find a place

Saenger Case Is Reversed

Supreme Court Sets Aside Mrs. Vick's Judgment

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)—The Supreme court advanced for submission next Monday a test suit to determine whether the 35 state senators should draw for two and four-year terms at this legislative session or in 1943.

The action would permit a decision March 3.

The case was advanced as a matter of public interest at the request of Leffel Gentry, assistant attorney general.

Reversing a Hempstead circuit court decision the supreme court set aside a $700 judgement awarded Mrs. Jean Vick, Hope waitress, against the Richard-Lightman theater corporation for injuries she alleged she suffered in a fall on the balcony of the Saenger theater in Hope, November 19, 1939.

Mrs. Vick contended the theater was not properly lighted, but the High Tribunal said records showed the theater had lighting fixtures on the walls and the aisle which were temporarily out. The mere fact that the aisle lights were out temporarily did not establish negligence, the court held.

Pact Reported for Turkey and the Bulgarians

Observers See Another "Hands Off" Declaration by Russia

SOFIA —(AP)—Bulgaria and Turkey have reached a non-aggression accord reliable sources said Monday, adding it meant Turkey would not fight in the event German troops entered Bulgaria.

It was said, further, the accord might have an important effect on Axis efforts to obtain peace with Greece since the last major obstacle to a possible German march into Greece to aid Italy had been removed.

(Turkey has been a non-belligerent ally of Britain pledged to go to her assistance in event of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area. Back of Turkey's attitude and Bulgaria's, as well, looms the U. S. S. R. and its reaction to German moves in southeast Europe.)

(It has been reported that Bulgaria, now believed likely to accede to German pressure for a right-of-way into eastern Greece, failed to obtain Russia's backing for any resistance to German demands. Now it would appear Russia, tactically or otherwise, has decided to back up Turkey.)

If the reported pact proves to have the effects outlined by informants, British observers acknowledged it would be a sharp blow to British influence in the Balkans.

Some diplomatic observers thought it might even remove any need for Germany actually to send troops through Bulgaria. They felt that Greece might yield promptly once the pact is formally announced. Merely the prospect of a German assault, these observers held, would be enough for Greece—this despite the victories she has won against Italy.

The odds would be tremendously against the Greeks if they had to face combined Nazi and Fascist armies.

Fair Grounds Get New Road

County Constructing Warehouse and Equipment Shed

Construction of a warehouse and building to house county equipment is under way on the Spring Hill road, and the county is cutting a new loop road past the entrance to Fair park to connect with the Spring Hill thoroughfare.

Some time back the City of Hope gave the county government enough ground on the old city-owned sewerage property on the Spring Hill road to accommodate its new equipment building. In return for which the county would assist in putting through additional roads in the vicinity of Fair park.

Negotiations are under way, it is understood, for a second road taking off from U. S. 87 at the State Highway Department building and running south along the western boundary of the Fair grounds to connect with the extension of 16th street—making another loop road in the vicinity of the Fair grounds.

Builders of Brain Power
Hypnosis Now Used in Dispelling Fears, Obsessions
Do gypsy women hypnotize people before robbing them or stealing their children? Is it true that people sometimes break laws because some strange hypnotized them against their will?
There is a brilliant psychiatrist at the Eliseo Hospital in Eliseo, Mich., who can answer these and many other questions about hypnotism. He is Dr. Milton H. Erickson.
Dr. Erickson decided at the age of eight what his life work should be, and at 12 he decided to specialize in mental peculiarities—a field in which he has, through his own efforts and hard manual work in college, become a national figure.
Born in a log cabin in the Rocky Mountains where his father was a gold prospector, he went east soon after to spend his childhood with eight brothers and sisters on a small Wisconsin farm. Young Erickson looked forward to attending the state university at Madison, but his plans were interrupted when he contracted infantile paralysis upon graduation from high school.
To get back in shape after this illness, he made a 120-mile round-trip by canoe on the Mississippi River and its tributaries. He left this convalescing trip with four dollars in his pocket. On his return three months later, there were eight dollars jingling in his pocket, and his health was 100 per cent improved.
Dr. Erickson is not superstitious, but he likes to tell about one date that has played an important part in his life—June 18.
First important event that marked this date for him was the year he was awarded three degrees at one time by the university. On a later June 18, he found an attractive blond psychologist whom he employed as an assistant in his work. She, too, had graduated from college on June 18. They chose June 18 for their wedding day.
Dr. Erickson is now directing research in mental abnormalities, training people for special work in treating mental diseases, and at the same time is also assistant professor at Wayne University School of Medicine in Detroit. He has made experiments in hypnosis to find whether it might be used in treating mild mental cases.
He has successfully overcome foolish fears and obsessions of otherwise apparently normal persons by using hypnosis.
Dr. Erickson can still find time for the cultivation of his 50 varieties of cacti.

Assert the Brotherhood of Man!

The very words, "brotherhood of man," sound old-fashioned in the world of today.
It is true that no age and no country, perhaps, ever accepted the phrase with complete literalness in even implication. But at least lip-service was given to the ideal, at least there was a sense of shame in falling short of that glistening goal.
Today, however, there are whole governments and systems based specifically on the rejection of this universal brotherhood, based entirely on the theory of "master" races to which the rest of us owe obedience and virtual servitude. In times past the brotherhood of man was as yet unattained ideal, a shining goal from which men in their weakness fell short. Today, in large sections of the earth, the brotherhood of man is deliberately rejected.
We of the United States just as deliberately reject the idea of a "master" race. We believe in men, in individuals; that the least of them is a man, and that the best of them is no more than that. On this ground our forefathers took their stand, on this ground we stand today. We believe that ground is not only solid but holy ground.
The week of the birthday of Washington (Feb. 22-28) has been chosen this year for the annual Brotherhood Week sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and President Roosevelt has urged its observance "to purge our hearts of all intolerance and to bind all our citizens in a common loyalty."
As never before, this Brotherhood Week should be marked by Americans to show the world how utterly we reject racial doctrines which are so false and obnoxious. There is, thank God, in the United States no dominant group which merely "tolerates" others as a grudging duty. Every group has its contribution to make to America, and our strength lies in the combination of them under a common urge to create here a better society.
Some time during this Brotherhood Week, it would be a fine thing if every person in the United States would read to himself in quiet, or aloud to another, these words from the call for the week's observance:
"We affirm the inherent dignity of every human being of whatever blood or creed. And, beyond all the divisions of our imperfect society, we assert the brotherhood of man."

The Scoreboard
Southwest Looks Grid Subsidization in Face
By POP BOONE
Fort Worth Press Sports Editor
One advantage in writing football down in the southwest is the fact we don't even hear much guff about over-emphasis or subsidization and all that worn-out line of chatter. Down in the southwest the boys who go crusading flit mostly with mild gripes about how Texas U. and the Aggies grab most of the good boys.
In other words, recruiting is the only angle of subsidization which gets much of a tumble. As every coaching and athletic staff in the conference really does a grand job of hustling young players, the only complaint settles on the two big state schools because they allegedly have more dough to offer the athletes.
Personally, the old subsidization chatter gives me a pain in my wrinkled neck. I know no harder way to work your way through school than by playing football.
One of these days the colleges will become tired of reading the over-emphasis dope and they'll go in for football on a near-pro basis, which would be swell. They'll adopt a scale of uniform wages, or a salary limit; they'll put in a player limit, possibly; it might be nice to even have draft rules similar to the pros, whereby the college clubs would get first shot at the all-state performers in high school.
It's pretty tough for the poor denominational schools to get their share of the hot boys, what with the scholastic advantages and allegedly higher wages offered by the two large and rich state schools. We even hear reports the two big schools recruit many too many boys and after they've been made ineligible for other schools, turn them out to grass, so to speak, with their fat contracts only a scrap of paper.
That's how it is down here. We make no bones of it and do not fail to holler when the big schools from north, east and west step in and grab off some hotshot schoolboy quarterback with an offer which cannot be matched or even thought of in our league.
Won't it be tough on magazine editors who each summer prepare an article on the "evils" of subsidiza-

Blessing Of Pope Goes to All People During Air Alarms
AP Feature Service
VATICAN CITY—Pope Pius XII has revealed that whenever the air raid alarm sounds over Rome he goes to his window overlooking St. Peter's square and imparts a blessing on the city and world.
This was reported by a Signorina Paricelli, daughter of a childhood friend of the Pontiff, after she had been received in audience.
The Pope asked if she was afraid during the alarms and what she did.

She replied that she was not afraid, but knelt in prayer.
The Pope praised the young woman for her faith and added that when the alarm sounded, he went from his bedroom on the third floor of the papal palace to his study on the second floor and prayed.
Before the prayer, he said, he went to the study window facing on St. Peter's square, overlooking all Rome, and imparted the apostolic benediction "unhbi et orbi," (to the city and the world).
The United States sold Soviet Russia $56,038,000 worth of goods in 1939. Exports to the U. S. S. R. in 1940 totaled $100,000,000.

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
LONDON—They had another birth in Tilbury the other night. That's London's largest shelter.

Father Grosser was there, Dr. Rosen was there, Samuel Goldman the shelter warden was there and Mrs. Lapidus the mother was there.

In fact, 8000 people were there—including my pal George, who is important.

For my pal George is president of the Tilbury Youth Club, editor of 'The Young Tilburian' and chairman of the dance committee.

Right now he's trying to get some ping-pong tables together and a dance organized because, he says, "We gotta do something. We have 1500 members and nothing to do but make love. That's awful." George is sixteen.

But it was my pal George who was the hero, when Mrs. Lapidus and the whole shelter got into an uproar.

Jungle Chant Against Bursting Bombs
Fire bombs were pouring down like shrapnel outside and Mrs. Lapidus was resting comfortably inside the one bed first aid post, so Dr. Rosen went to the other end of the shelter where an ancient Gold Coast negro, ill with fever it was reported, lay quietly chanting.

It was some half-forgotten jungle chant. It came from deep down, maybe 2000 years, because this black man was sad. He sensed death, but Dr. Rosen said all he needed was two or three days of hospitalization.

But you could still hear the low chant continuing when you moved away to back to the Red Cross post where Dr. Rosen was going to ring for an ambulance.

By now little beads of sweat were dripping from Mrs. Lapidus' forehead, and when Dr. Rosen found her pulse pounding an off-beat he told the nurse to ring for another ambulance immediately. There was still time to get her into a hospital ward where a doctor would have a decent break, he said.

But that was the moment when a fire bomb followed by a small high explosive struck the building above and crashed through into the shelter. The lights went out, dirt and brick dust began pouring through the shelter and until Samuel Goldman and two policemen lighted hurricane lamps and discovered the damage wasn't much, there was some screaming and lots of scrambling.

Outside, the building atop the shelter was beginning to blaze and everyone was wondering how long it would be before several more high explosives followed. Only no more followed because fast-working firemen soon had the beacon fire under control and within thirty minutes it was completely out.

Inside the first aid post, the volunteer nurse was furiously jiggling the telephone hook, but no one answered. Along with the lights, telephone communication had been temporarily burned out.

Pal George Takes Over
But it was my pal George who stepped into the breach. He had been standing holding a hurricane lamp for the doctor, because as president of the Tilbury Youth Club that's his job when the lights go out.

This time, though, he left the shelter and started running through the streets without a tin hat until he reached the nearest emergency ambulance station. Fifteen minutes later they were placing Mrs. Lapidus in the ambulance, with George sitting in back. Dr. Rosen said he'd come in back, because he was beginning to have doubts whether the ambulance would ever make the hospital in time.

Racing through the streets, they passed more and more buildings on fire. Evidently the Germans had released a concentrated barrage of fire bombs over this whole area in an effort to burn the homes and shelters and so stampede the people.

And when they came to the hospital George says, they drove right past because that, too, was on fire, and they hadn't noticed it. They turned around, though, and then the driver swung into the driveway. But it was useless to unload Mrs. Lapidus because nurses and doctors were moving patients into the open.

So Dr. Rosen examined Mrs. Lapidus, took her pulse again, and then told the driver to go like hell back to Tilbury. At least that one bed and the assistance of a nurse would be better than trying to make delivery in the bitter cold air.

They made it, all right, but Dr. Rosen says even now he doesn't know how, except that maybe the fact Mrs. Lapidus was having twins slowed up the schedule.

A Pagan and a Christian
It was the Gold Coast black, though, who climaxed that evening. Father Grosser had been waiting outside until Mrs. Lapidus had been taken care of, then he went in and told Dr. Rosen the black was pretty bad. Dr. Rosen said the black had been worse than he admitted some time ago, but it would have been foolish to alarm people in that end of the shelter. The two of them and George and a Red Cross warden walked down to the end of the shelter.

The half caste was kneeling in prayer before a grotesque wooden image. A candle threw flickers of light across the darkened section of that wooden platform and suddenly you felt England had been left behind, that you were now in the world of voodoo.

The black was fumbling for a small charm around his neck, chanting softer now. Father Grosser did not stop this primitive worship, but you could see his lips moving in prayer for the savage as Dr. Rosen bent down.

Then George and the warden carried him off to the first aid post and a short time later they got an ambulance and took him to a hospital in another section of town.

My pal George said he was one of the 800 who died a natural death in London last week.

How Slick Actors Get Away With Dramatic Larceny

HOLLYWOOD — Scene stealing is a form of dramatic larceny successfully practiced only by the slickest actors. And yet I have just watched a couple of lowly stand-ins trying to steal a scene for their principals.

I say "lowly" because stand-ins never are photographed but are automations who move or pose as ordered while the cameraman and director work out the lighting and mechanics of a scene before it is filmed with real players. During the camera rehearsal with stand-ins, marks are made on the floor so the actors will know where to walk and where to pause so they will be in focus.

The man and woman who stand in for Brian Aherne and Kay Francis were on the set while a scene was being planned for "The Man Who Lost Himself." Director Edward Ludwig whispered, "Watch 'em edging back from the camera. I'll be doggoned if they're not trying to upstage each other!"

It's an old trick, and you've seen it done hundreds of times without realizing that a theft was being committed. Actors A and B are standing together and talking. If A steps back a little, B's only natural action is to turn partly away from the camera in order to face him. Thus an audience will see less of B's face and more of A's, and will keep its attention on A.

Similar attention-stealing trick is for A to maneuver B into a position in which B's face is in shadow. When the two stand-ins came off the set, the woman went to Miss Francis and said, "Don't you worry; I saw to it that no matter where you stand you'll be lighted. I didn't let that guy back away from me!"

Scene Stealer Gets Cue
On Head
There are several kinds of scene-stealers. Children and animals are natural because audiences watch them even when they're not doing anything.

Then there are muggers, such as Mickey Rooney, and stationary acrobats like Jimmy Stewart, who likes to put his hands in his pockets and rock on his heels. Jack Oakie is the most notorious fly-catcher; even if he's in the background he'll invent some little piece of business—such as scowling and puffing at a cigar—that has gone out—that keeps you watching him.

W. C. Fields is famed for once having swatted a fly-catcher into unconsciousness. It was during his pool table act on the stage. After wondering why the audience kept snickering, Fields discovered a rival coming hidden under the table and clomping in pantomime. He bopped the interloper with his cue.

On location in Death Valley recently I saw Bette Davis challenge Jimmy Cagney for trying to steal a scene by roasting too violently. She was supposed to and a quarrel by pushing him backward into a patch of cactus, and thus it should have been her triumph. Instead, Cagney thrashed around and howled and went into such frantic contortions among the artificial stickers that a screen audience would have forgotten all about Miss Davis. As she tartly commented, he was practically committing suicide to win a laugh.

Plunky Steals King's Thunder
When Harry Davenport reminisced over a 75th birthday cake a few weeks ago, he told of a classic case of scene-stealing on a night when John F. Sheridan was playing Richard III.

In the fourth act a flunkey rushes in and announces: "My lord, the Duke of Buckingham is taken!" This is good news for the king, who wastes no time in ordering the duke's execution and rushing off to the battle.

"Sheridan would draw his sword

Professional Heel-With Soul

Many Say Gene Kelly Isn't Heel at All

AP Feature Service
NEW YORK—Scratch a heel and you find Gene Kelly, who isn't a heel at all.

As Joey Evans in the new musical comedy "Pal Joey," Gene is about the heeliest heel that ever stepped on a neck, but off-stage he's a friendly Irish lad who started a dancing school to help pay his way through Pittsburgh university, barnstormed night clubs from New York to Dallas and made himself known to Broadway as the hooter in William Somerset Maugham's "The Razor's Edge." (The dancing school still is going "strong.") Maybe you read John O'Hara's magazine stories about Joey, the small-time night club entertainer, who made good in Chicago and found himself out in a chilly Lake Michigan breeze again when his society "benefactress" withdrew herself from his affections and her bankroll from his night club.

By the standards of all respectable citizens, Joey is thoroughly nasty—a braggart, a cheat, a wastrel who takes things as they come and takes the look-out for "mike," his term for young, beautiful and, if possible, rich femininity.

"Yet," said Gene Kelly as he finished a mid-day breakfast, "Joey isn't bad—he just doesn't know the difference."

"He's an ignorant, low class bum with nothing but good looks and a good line; by all his standards, and the standards of the people he's been brought up with, it's perfectly all right in fact it's an accomplishment—to land a rich society dame and work her for all he can."

Swimming Rabbits
All rabbits can swim when necessary. The marsh and swamp rabbits, two American species, are known to be regularly aquatic in their habits.

and shout "Away toward Salisbury!" Davenport recalled. "Then he and his men would do what he called 'taking the stage'—marching toward the footlights and then exiting with a flourish."

"But this one night we had a substitute courier who came on and said, 'My lord, the Duke of Buckingham is taken—and we have cut off his head! There stood Sheridan, sword in the air and all his thunder stolen.' He turned to be messenger and snarled, 'The hell you say!'"

New Issue of 'Tobaccoland'

Chesterfield Publishes Book of Facts on Tobacco

So many requests have been received for the big free book, "Tobaccoland, U. S. A.," offered by Chesterfield cigarettes in a recent national newspaper advertisement, that another million copies for immediate distribution are being rushed through publication.

Individuals and groups will receive copies on request to Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, 530 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

"Tobaccoland, U. S. A." is the name given to the group of states in which America's fine cigarette tobaccos are grown. Tobacco is grown in 22 states of the Union, the primary cigarette tobacco states are Maryland, Florida, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Missouri.

Scores of colleges have written to praise the completeness of this story of America's great tobacco industry, which in 42 pages with over 100 large photographic illustrations fully describes tobacco farming and cigarette manufacture.

Of particular interest to many readers is the long preparation of tobaccos for Chesterfield, a process lasting from two to three years. Careful steps of planting, growing, harvesting, curing, ageing, conditioning for correct moisture content, and blending of the various domestic tobaccos with imported Turkish leaf are the ground-work. Then comes modern foot-proof manufacture, making possible production of millions of packages of cigarettes per day.

The Chesterfield factories at Durham, N. C., portrayed in this book, alone cover one hundred and fifty acres. Every visitor to "Tobaccoland" finds a tour through these factories an adventure in American manufacturing ingenuity, and he never forgets the bright golden color and rich fragrance of the newly-opened hogshead of tobacco, fresh from their long mellowing in storage.

"Tobaccoland, U. S. A." is also the story of a typical Southern tobacco-growing family, showing how the family's life revolves around the progress of the tobacco crop from season to season. The importance of the cities and universities of America's tobacco capital are shown in pictures and text.

New Campaign Released

Many celebrities are again included in the new Chesterfield advertising scheduled nationally in newspapers during February and March. Among these are Dick Shaugnessy, U. S. all-gauge skeet shooting champion and winner of nearly 70 skeet titles; Sally Young, top-ranking bridge player; Frances Burke, 1940-41 Miss America; and Brenda Joyce of motion pictures. Patsy Garrett, singer-form Ford Waring's "Chesterfield-Pleasure Time" broadcasts, and Pat O'Brien, film star, are featured to appear in a special St. Patrick's Day advertisement.

National billboard showings, dealer displays and the Waring "Pleasure Time" and Glenn Miller "Moonlight Serenade" radio shows over the leading networks support the newspaper program.

Italians Swept From Egypt

British Assert No Soldiers Left Except Prisoners

CAIRO (AP)—British headquarters declared there are no Italian soldiers left in Egypt, the Sudan or Kenya Colony "except as prisoners."

Referring to the fall of Kermuk, a strategic post on Ethiopia's western frontier with the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, announced Sunday, the high command said in effect that now all Italian invaders in the three zones had been repulsed, killed or captured.

There was a continued death of reports on the situation in North Africa where Britain's offensive toward Tripoli, capital of Libya, represented the deepest penetration of Italy's North African empire.

In Libya and Eritrea the British said "the situation remains unchanged."

In Eritrea, northernmost part of Italy's East African domain, the British offensive is centering on Cheren, gateway to Asmara, Eritrean capital. Aside from the thrust at Kermuk, the British are driving into Ethiopia on the road to Gondar. There "in the area east of Lake Rudolf our troops continue their penetration" the communique said.

● SERIAL STORY

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

BY RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY, Kent tells April just how much this day means to him. She continues the man-nerade. She and Ann's favorite picnic grounds easily helps Kent build the grill. Then he kisses her. "You've never kissed me like that before," Kent says. "For the first time, I can believe you're in love with me."

THIS MUST BE LOVE

CHAPTER VII

WHEN Kent kissed her and said, "I believe you're in love with me," April stood trembling, scarcely daring to move.

Then she whispered, out of this daze of happiness, "Yes, I think I am."

"It had to be like this, Ann."

Ann! Her sister's name. It was Ann he thought he held in his arms.

Reality came back to April. She was falling in love with Kent Carter, her sister's sweetheart. This couldn't happen. When she'd started out on this jaunt with Kent today, it hadn't been to fall in love with him herself, but to keep him in love with Ann.

Kent was saying, "We're a lot alike, Ann. We both have cheap love-making. That's why this means so much. It's the real thing."

"The real thing?" She repeated it slowly, wonderingly.

She looked down to see the brave spurts of flames in the fire sputtering out.

"Wait a minute," she tried to speak gaily. "I'll have to rush for kindling. There isn't enough fire left to toast a marshmallow."

"A good squaw," he grinned.

ALL the time she was getting the grill hot and unpacking the lunch kit, April wrestled with an inward turmoil. Kent was Ann's sweetheart. So she, April, must forget him, stop caring before she cared too much.

Her eyes smarted from the smoke; she rubbed a smudge across her cheek; she blinked her fingers. It was the quick, tingling pain that everything suddenly cleared itself.

There wasn't a problem any more! Kent loved the girl he had just kissed. What difference would it matter if she told him she was April? He might be startled for a minute, but then he'd surely have to laugh at what had happened—laugh and then kiss her again and say how wonderful it was that things had turned out this way.

She would tell him as soon as they'd eaten. All about how Ann had gone to New York for a singing career, how she, April, had started to pinch-hit and then fallen head over heels in love.

She came out of her daydream as Kent spoke. "Is it true that when you're in love you're not supposed to have an appetite?"

"That's what I've heard."

"Gosh," he said, "that counts me out. I'm starving."

"Maybe it counts me out, too," she said, always remembering in the last split second to speak softly as Ann would, instead of shouting in a gay, glad outburst.

"You mean you have an appetite?" He pretended to be very disapproving.

"Well," she apologized, "I didn't eat any breakfast."

"I missed it myself. A nice meal, breakfast. Specially the coffee."

"Octavia sent along the breakfast brew in the thermos."

"So I discovered when you were foraging for the firewood."

"Kent, you cheated! For that you can twiddle this fork while I have a cup by myself, too."

He moved awkwardly to the fire. She placed the fork in his hand, touching the steak with it to give him his bearings. He didn't want sympathy. He hated being fussed over and pampered. Funny how she seemed to understand him so well.

Funny, too, as she sipped the hot coffee, that she couldn't take her eyes from him. She was certain now that the wind and sun had whipped out the whiteness in his face. Even the dark glasses didn't look so frightening. And what a swell smile he had. It went straight to your heart. Her heart. April Burnett really falling in love for the first time.

SHE kept making herself think that he would understand, that he wouldn't care because she was April and not Ann. Every time doubts lifted up, she downed them.

"What's it like in the army, Kent?" She started conversation for a little while to keep from thinking too much.

"Ah, it's a grand experience," he spoke warmly. "You'll have to see the camp with me some time soon. It's impressive, magnificent. When you get up early in the

Newspaper Merges After Two Centuries

VENICE, Italy—(AP)—The Gazzetta di Venezia, believed Europe's oldest newspaper, has been merged with another newspaper, the Gazzettino, after exactly two centuries of daily publication.

R. A. F. Bombs Italian Ports

Ports Where Germans Are Based Are Bombed

CAIRO (AP)—Several hangers and airmen at Brindisi, Italian port, were set afire in a raid Saturday night.

The well-filled chamber, declared: "There is but one way to stop a conqueror—that way is to defeat him."

Barkley began his speech with an assertion that if Germany wins the war the U. S. "will face not only a hostile Germany but a hostile world."

Barkley substituted for Chairman George of the foreign relations committee after a throat ailment prevented George from delivering the first argument for the measure.

Barkley quoted statements by Hitler and his lieutenants and said they demonstrated "one of the motives for this war is the economic domination of the world."

The R. A. F. announced Monday. The communique also reported fires and explosions at two other Italian ports, one Comiso in Sicily, where the Germans are reported to be based.

Greek Offense Is Successful

More Strategic Positions Taken Sources Say

ATHENS (AP)—The Greeks pounding at Italian positions in a general offensive behind Greek and British air attacks were reported Monday to have forced the Fascists from a number of strongholds and mountain peaks in fierce bayonet fighting on the central Albanian front.

The allied aviation was credited with greatly aiding the ground forces whose offensive is now in its fifth day. Repeated bomb and machine-gun attacks were reported on Italian gun positions, military positions and crossroads.

Italian fliers have shown virtually no activity in recent days, reports from the front said, leading to speculation that Mussolini's air force might have been seriously hampered by heavy air raids of the last few days.

Nazis Bombed With Leaflets

British Drop Phamp-lets on Nazi-Occupied Towns

LONDON (AP)—A round trip flight of about 2,000 miles to western Poland and back in which propaganda pamphlets rather than bombs were showered on German occupied territory was reported by the air ministry Monday.

Commenting on that long distance foray which took place Saturday night the British recalled that bombing raids on Germany were preceded by pamphlet "attacks."

The venture was disclosed in connection with an announcement that Britain's offensive operations Sunday including bombing of Belgian and Dutch coastal objectives.

As for Poland, the communique said: "On Saturday night aircraft of the bomber command dropped leaflets on Katowice and Cracow areas of Poland."

Other sources described it as the longest operating flight by the RAF since the start of the war, far exceeding the 1,200 mile trip flown by the British to bomb northern Italy.

We had the W. P. A. engineers make a survey and drawing of this property and are now informed that certain residents object to the property being deeded to the State for an armory.

In as much as it was not the duty of this committee to obtain a site, we are making this report in order that you may suggest other sites or that the matter may be brought before the City for their consideration.
